Did you know?

The Man in the Moon was Reese Witherspoon's debut film. She got the part answering an open casting call in Nashville, Tennessee for extras, but landed the lead role.

For Reese Witherspoon, all's fair in love and showbiz

NYT SYNDICATE

WHEN was the last time you saw Reese Witherspoon in a big, sexy, over-the-top, unapologetically commercial action/romance movie? The answer is never – at least until now, with the imminent release of This Means War, in which she stars with Tom Hardy and Chris Pine.

"I was really excited when Fox approached me to do This Means War," the Oscar winner says, "because I'd never done anything action-oriented before. It was a great opportunity to combine the comedy and romance with the action, so I felt comfortable. It wasn't like I was suddenly pretending to be an action star, with somebody seeing me with a gun in my hand and trying to take me seriously."

"Then, when they got Tom and Chris to play the two male leads, I thought, 'This is great,' because I was excited to work with these two guys who are on the precipice of huge movie careers. So it had a little of everything."

Set for release on February 14, This Means Wars casts Witherspoon as Lauren, a woman who falls for two men, Tuck (Hardy) and FDR (Pine), not realizing that they're best friends and partners as agents of the CIA. As one might expect, it's not long before the sparks – and the bullets – start to fly, as FDR and Tuck's personal and professional lives converge, ultimately putting Lauren's heart at risk, not to mention her life.

Speaking telephonically from a Los Angeles hotel that's serving as home base for the film's domestic and international publicity push, Witherspoon reports that at times she felt as if she were making two separate and distinct romantic comedies, both under the direction of action maestro McG. In one she shared scenes with Hardy, the star of Bronson (2008), Inception (2010) and the upcoming The Dark Knight Rises, and in the other with Pine, till date best known for Star Trek (2009) and Unstoppable (2010).

"Tom's character is more brooding and tough and sensitive," Witherspoon says. "He's got the sensitive-tattoo-guy thing going on, and he's obviously very British as well. Chris is very American in his style. His patter is very American, and that kind of witty repartee and meeting-of-the-minds thing he has with Lauren is great. McG and I kept going, 'Every time we get to set, it's like we're making a totally different movie.'

"And, on top of that, it was like we were making two other movies," she continues. "Chelsea Handler plays my best friend. We had our own insular world, and all of her lines were ad-libbed. She's been very vocal about saying, 'I didn't even read the script.' Then the boys had their scenes together as best friends, with the competition between them. So it was actually kind of like making four movies in one."

McG put Witherspoon through some hair-raising moments, particularly a chase sequence near the end of the movie. However, that's not the scene that stands out as her takeaway memory of her This Means War experience. There's a scene where McG talked me into dancing around in a man's sweat shirt and my underwear," Witherspoon says, giggling at the memory. "But, you know, it was all in fun and in the spirit of that's what women do when they're home alone on a Friday night. They dance around and sing stupid songs and eat popcorn. It was actually sort of freeing. It was nice."

Hollywood observers expect This Means War to perform well at the box office, and many eyes will be on it, since it's seen in some quarters as a referendum on Witherspoon's star power. That's because her two most recent films, How Do You Know (2010) and Water for Elephants (2011), the former with veteran filmmaker James L Brooks and the latter with trendy co-star Robert Pattinson, were perceived to be disappointments. How Do You Know really did tank, earning back less than half of its reported $120 million budget during its worldwide release. However, Water for Elephants cost less than $40 million and grossed nearly $120 million worldwide. Witherspoon makes no apologies for either film.

"I don't perceive Water for Elephants as a disappointment," she says. "It made so much money. I traveled all over the world for it, and it actually accomplished everything we wanted it to. It's just hard. You make different movies for different reasons. Of course, when you go out with a big romantic movie, you want it to be seen. You take it personally. You put your heart and soul into these things.

"Jim Brooks movie.. I worked on that for seven months," she continues. "It's a disappointment when audiences don't love the movie as much as you would hope they do."

"But, in the bigger picture, I look at people like Diane Keaton, who has been in so many movies for so long and is continuing to make great movies, and Meryl Streep, who is arguably having the best time in her career," Witherspoon says. "I just hope to create a whole body of work that spans many different successes and different kinds of successes. At least I'm trying, you know? I'm trying to always, out of the gate, do something different than I've done before."

Witherspoon's next project certainly sounds different: She will co-star with Matthew McConaughey, Michael Shannon and Sam Shepard in director Jeff Nichols' film Mud. The story follows two boys (Jacob Lofland and Tye Sheridan) who, on an island on the Mississippi River, meet a fugitive named Mud (McConaughey). Intrigued by the man, the boys help him both to stay a step of his dogged pursuers and to locate the love of his life (Witherspoon).

"I was really attracted to Jeff as a filmmaker and to this story being about the South," says Witherspoon, who hails from Louisiana. "There are very few Southern filmmakers, and it's very important that we support those stories. There are whole demographics, whole cultures that aren't represented in film. Jeff asked me to do the movie. He wrote me a letter and then called me and emailed me. I was just such a fan of (Nichols') Take Shelter (2010). I really believe in him, so I'm excited about that movie."

Still only 35, Witherspoon has appeared in more than 30 films, winning an Oscar as Best Actress for her performance as June Carter in Walk the Line (2005). In addition to Mud, which she recently wrapped, the actress will soon start work on another drama, Devil's Knot, about the West Memphis Three case.

On the personal front, she's actively raising her young children, Ava and Deacon, with ex-husband Ryan Phillippe, and in March will celebrate the first anniversary of her wedding to talent agent Jim Toth.

"I really love making movies," Witherspoon says. "I have a wonderful family. I have a lot of different interests in my life. Somebody once said to me, 'Don't worry about the future and don't worry about the past, but take pictures and make plans.'

Aguilera ready to reconcile with 'abusive' dad

SINGER-ACTRESS Christina Aguilera thinks it may be time to meet her estranged father, whom she has not seen for the last 12 years. She had earlier said that her father Fausto, whom she last met in the year 1999, was physically and emotionally abusive. "I've talked about how rough things were for me and I'm sure he's heard it. He can't be thrilled about it. So maybe one day we can do lunch ... I'm 31 years old now. Maybe it's time," contactmusic.com quoted Aguilera as saying.

UNHAPPY with your newest cosmetic procedure? There's hope to correct it, but not without complications. The fine lines around your eyes and mouth were giving you sleepless nights, so you didn't think twice before rushing to get yourself a shot of botox. But little did you know that what works for others may not necessarily work for you. What's worse, it's not making you displeased with his or her filler, it can be undone after four days of getting the original procedure. The face becomes augmented the very next day due to swelling, and you can't really make out the actual result till the swelling decreases," says Rao.

Baliarsing agrees, saying, "You can't undo a procedure immediately after getting it done. You have to wait until it has settled. In cosmetic surgeries, you have to wait at least three to six months for proper healing before going in for corrective surgery."

ful or pretty as you'd imagined. However, in other more dramatic procedures, it's not a good idea to wait too long to correct it. Quite a few people wish to go back to their original breast size after getting them surgically enhanced. But doing so after a long period of time is a bad idea as removing the implants leaves two empty sacs where the implants used to be, especially if the implants are sizeable.

The moral of the story? Many people rush into getting cosmetic surgeries with half-baked knowledge and without thinking about the ramifications. Although you can undo a procedure or go for corrective surgery if the original one goes wrong, you must remember that cosmetic surgeries are artificial and you can't have a trial and error approach towards them. It is better to be well-informed and thoroughly aware about the perils before you jump head first into it.

However, Amrish Baliarsing, a consultant plastic surgeon begs to differ. "Fillers can't be undone because they are not concentrated in one place. They go into various tissues and therefore it is impossible to go back to your original state," he says.

Test of time
So where does that leave you? Do not despair, since temporary fillers only last an average of four months or so. "But if the patient is really

With DNA testing, adoptees find a way to connect with family

RACHEL L SWARNS
NYT SYNDICATE

GROWING up, Khrysta Vaughan always knew that she had inherited her looks and mannerisms from her father, and that her appreciation for tradition and old-fashioned gentility stemmed from her parents' Southern roots. But those facets of her self-image crumbled when she was told, at age 42, that she had been adopted.

She began searching for her origins, only to find out that her adoption records had been sealed, a common practice in the 1960s. Then Vaughan stumbled across an ad from a DNA testing company offering to help people who had been adopted find clues to their ancestry and connections to blood relatives.

About five weeks after shipping off two tiny vials of her cells from a swab of her cheek, Vaughan received an email informing her that her bloodlines extended to France, Romania and West Africa.

She was also given the names and email addresses of a dozen distant cousins. In January, she drove 334 kilometres from her hometown here to Evansville, Indiana, to meet her third cousin, the first relative to respond to her emails. Vaughan is black and her cousin is white, and they have yet to find their common ancestor. But Vaughan says that doesn't matter.

"Somebody is related to me in this world," she said. "Somebody out there has my blood. I can look at her and say, 'This is my family.'"

A growing number of adoptees, now in the thousands, are turning to DNA testing companies in hopes of piecing together the puzzles of their beginnings. Some long to learn whether their family trees first bloomed in Ireland or Italy, Europe or South America. Others want to know whether they are genetically predisposed to developing diabetes, cancer or other diseases. Most adoptees are hungry for information that will lead to their birth parents, but some are also expanding their conception of family as they embrace a far-flung constellation of second, third and fourth cousins.

DNA testing companies are stepping up their efforts to reach this community, posting advertisements on adoption message boards and testimonials on their websites. Adoptees and some groups that serve them are also spreading the word.

"There has never been a better time to establish your biological identity," says the website of Adoption.com, which promotes its efforts to unite adoptees and blood relatives online.

Several companies provide tests that can confirm whether adoptees are related to individuals they already know. Others cast a wider net by plugging DNA results into databases that contain tens of thousands of genetic samples, provided mostly by people searching for their ancestral roots. The tests detect genetic markers that reveal whether

Most adoptees are hungry for information that will lead to their birth parents, but some are also expanding their conception of family as they embrace a far-flung constellation of second, third and fourth cousins people share a common ancestor or relative.

Some experts on adoption and genetics have criticised ancestry and genealogy testing companies, saying they are, at times, connecting people whose genetic links are tenuous – in effect, stretching the definition of a relative. Nevertheless, the growing popularity of the tests, combined with social media sites that connect people day to day, has given some adoptees a sense of family that feels tangible, intimate and immediate.

Within minutes of receiving the names of her distant relatives, Vaughan, a freelance project manager, was admiring their photographs on Facebook. Another adoptee who found family through DNA testing, Kathy Borgmann, a 49-year-old corn farmer in New Palestine, Indiana, exchanged emails with cousins who delighted her by saying, "Welcome to the family."

Alan Bogner of Olympia, Washington, felt such kinship with his newly discovered second and third cousins that he attended their family reunion in Iowa. He learned, among other things, that many of them were also tall – he is 1.8 meters and 13 centimetres tall – and that they shared his liberal politics.

"It sounds so baloney, but they're just so much like me," said Bogner, 54, who works for the governor's office.

The tests have their limitations. The price of testing can range from $99 to more than $500, putting them out of reach for some people. Company officials also caution that it is much more common to find second and third cousins than birth parents or siblings.

Neil Schwartzman of Montreal struck gold when his test connected him with his sister – "I was gob-smacked," he recalled – but such cases are not typical.

Company officials say the odds are improving, though, as more people pay for tests and add their DNA to the pool of potential matches. Two testing companies – Family Tree DNA and 23andMe – have databases that contain samples from 350,000 and 125,000 people, respectively, and their executives say those numbers are rising. In recent years, about 9,000 of their customers have identified themselves as adoptees, company officials say, but they believe the actual number is larger since not everyone shares their reasons for testing.

For somebody looking for a match, "maybe there's no one in the database today, but in two years a first cousin might be there," said Anne Wojcicki, the chief executive of 23andMe.

DNA testing companies, which compete for customers, do not pool their databases, so people often submit samples to more than one.

Not everyone is hoping to find new relatives. Some adoptees who have found genetic matches have been rebuffed by their distant kin. Most people take genealogical DNA tests to fill gaps in their family trees, not to find new members of their clans. Bogner said several cousins identified through DNA testing stopped communicating once they learned he was adopted.

"It was horribly disappointing," he said. Elizabeth Bartholet, an expert on adoption at Harvard Law School, said the proliferation of testing highlights the need for broader access to adoption records. In the meantime, she says, adoptees would be better served by nurturing the relationships they already have. But Vaughan, who is now 44, said her newfound relatives have filled a void in her life. Her adoptive father died when she was 9 and she had found comfort over the years knowing that she shared his smile.

Jackman Families

"I was crying because I wasn't Daddy's little girl," said Vaughan, describing the day that her adoptive mother finally told her the truth. "I needed to find my place in the world."

She sent out her first email to a cousin identified by FamilyTree DNA in March. It landed in the inbox of Jennifer Grigsby, a research analyst from Somerset, Kentucky, who read it with astonishment. Grigsby had taken a DNA test to learn more about her lineage. "I wasn't looking for a new relationship," she said. But when the two women started talking, "there was like an instant connection," said Grigsby, 37. "Finally!" she said when they met, and she hugged her third cousin like she would never let go.

Insecurity part of showbiz: Raveena

RAVEENA Tandon feels that in showbiz, insecurities are part and parcel of life. The actress made the candid confession during an episode of UTV Stars' Superstar Santa while trying to mend a broken relationship of a girl and her possessive boyfriend. The girl works in showbiz and her erratic working hours didn't go down too well with the guy. At this point, Raveena intervened and told the girl that his insecurities and possessiveness were justified. "Bollywood as an industry is such that insecurities are part and parcel of life!" said the actress, who has been in Bollywood for over two decades.

No engagement plans, says Kareena

KAREENA Kapoor recently rubbished reports that she and her beau Saif Ali Khan are planning to get formally engaged in February. Setting the record straight, the actress said, "There are no such plans." The actress was in Delhi to promote her forthcoming film Ek Main Aur Ekk Tu along with her co-star Imran Khan and director Shakun Batra. Kareena was stormed with questions about her marriage plans. When asked, she dodged the question saying, "We are only looking forward to the release of Agent Vinod in March." But Imran, known for his witty replies, joked, "They will get married one week after the release of Agent Vinod and that's April 1st, the April Fool's Day." He looked at Kareena and said, "You could have taken my answer, it would definitely have made headlines."

Anupama Verma

Anupama Verma is the latest victim of ATM fraud

TRIBUNE NEWS NETWORK

MODEL, actress and reality TV show contestant, Anupama Verma is the latest victim of ATM fraud. She was duped of Rs 17.36 lakhs from her account at an ICICI bank branch in Bandra, Mumbai. Two former employees of the bank have been arrested for siphoning off the large sum from Anupama, who is a 'wealth member' of the bank.

"I am a wealth member of the bank, which means I have a relationships manager (RM) to handle all my transactions and I do not have to go to the bank myself. I do not use ATM cards. I have been a member of the bank for the past fourteen years and I have never used my card. They issued the card as a protocol, in fact the ATM pin of my card has not even been opened. I find it odd that not even an eyebrow was raised when a customer who has never used her card is making about 170 transactions," said the model.

Anupama came to know of the fraud when she issued a cheque for a paltry sum of Rs 750 and it bounced. She says she was left red-faced when the cheque bounced a second time and she had to talk to the bank. She also says that she would have detected that her money was being swindled had her RM taken note.

"I would have known last July that this is happening because I had asked my RM to check my account and tell me why my cheque was bouncing. He said it happens sometimes and will be resolved." Anupama also maintains that she was never informed about the scam till the last minute.

Anupama adds that she got "the shock of my life when I asked for my account statement when I went to bank with my brother. I learnt I had around Rs 37,000 in my account. I was mortified. There was no SMS alert coming to me for all the withdrawals that were made. They told me I must have cancelled the alert which I never did. When nothing happened for the first week and the regional heads weren't giving me any numbers, I called Chanda Kocchar, the CEO of the company.

I have immense respect for Chanda and if it weren't for her intervention, I don't think I would have gotten anywhere. The internal policing of the bank was unable to solve the issue and then they approached the police," says Anupama adding, "I was appalled that after all of this, it wasn't the bank that was updating me on the situation, it was the police."

She says that most of her money has been returned to her but adds, "I have lost trust in the system. What if it was a poor person? I made an impact because I have the media and lawyers to go to."

CELEBRITY VICTIMS OF ATM FRAUD

According to reports, Shah Rukh Khan's credit card came into the possession of three men in 2011, who then shopped at a mall in Mumbai for clothes worth Rs 25,000. The trio, Vinay Vijay Tambe (22), James Paul Peremal (28), and Shekar Jadhav (44) were taken into police custody after the store employee noticed that Vinay signed off on a card that belonged to SRK.

Another incident in 2011 involving Sachin Tendulkar's debit card came to light when a man was caught trying to withdraw money from an ATM using Sachin Tendulkar's debit card. The police became suspicious when Shoyeb Doodhwala (21), took longer than usual to withdraw money from the ATM. It was later found that the card was a mere dummy stolen from ATM displays to show off to his friends.

This seems like a 'model year' for B-Town as new generation rampscorchers and former supermodels bag plum projects

FROM flaunting sexy designer collections to delivering dialogues on the big screen, the evolution of models into film stars has become a common trend.

The year's first model debut is going to be made by British model and beauty queen Amy Jackson in Gautham Menon's (Ekk Deewana Tha), followed by Angelina Jolie lookalike Esha Gupta in Kunal Deshmukh's Jannat 2. Taking their first Bollywood bow are: Neha Hinge (Femina Miss India International 2010) will make her debut in Joe Rajan's Love U Soniyo, Simran Kaur Mundi (Femina Miss India Universe 2008) made her debut in Pawan Gill's Jo Hum Chahe, Siddharth Malhotra in Karan Johar's Student Of The Year and Sarah Jane Dias playing a lead role in Sachin Yardi's Kya Super Kool Hai Hum (after a cameo in Game last year), Amrit Maghera in Saahil Premi's international dance movie Someday..., Diana Penty in Homi Adjanja's Cocktail.

The list of models trying to woo the movie viewer is simply getting bigger. There's also talk that the sizzling hottie Angela Johnson is also reportedly making her debut in a movie opposite Salman Khan.

What makes the model trek to movies easier is the fact they are camera-friendly, have toned physiques and are headturners. Says director

Milind Soman

Gautham Menon, "Amy Jackson is gorgeous and vivacious. She is a thinking actor who is brilliant with her lines. She has the confidence to carry herself off in everything." Trade analyst Taran Adarsh too says, "Models have the confidence to walk on the stage and if they can deliver lines, that is a perfect combination. An able, competent director can mould them completely."

Milind Soman, who's done Bollywood films on and off, returns in Ashwini Chaudhary's Jodi Breakers and Sajeeva Balath's The Flag. Model/actor Dipannita Sharma Atwal, who was recently seen in Maneesh Sharma's Ladies Vs Ricky Bahl is also doing Jodi Breakers. Anne Hathaway throws engagement bash

ANNE Hathaway and actor Adam Shulman threw an engagement party for family and friends in New York. Hathaway joked that her beau ruined her plans to stay single. "I am very much in love with him, Adam totally ruined my plan. I was really actually looking forward to a little alone time, and then I fell in love like a fool," the 29-year-old actress said. The couple celebrated their engagement on Saturday with 125 guests at Housing Works Bookstore Cafe in Manhattan. Hathaway and Shulman started dating in 2008. "We hit it off immediately but it took us a pretty long time to get together. He thought that I had a boyfriend and I thought that he had a girlfriend, so I thought that I'd better keep my distance," she added.

Jennifer Garner uses fame for charity

JENNIFER Garner says she uses her fame to do as much charity work as possible and make a positive difference in the world. The 39-year-old, who is married to Hollywood hunk Ben Affleck, accepts her celebrity status and the attention that goes with it, and she is determined to use her profile to help charities and do good deeds. "My view on fame? In the film business, you have perks beyond your dreams. You can make a sick child smile and raise money for charity, just by being well known. I also strongly believe in treating people well, whatever their job and whatever happens. I think good manners are important," Garner said.

Some higher wattage for AARP film awards

BROOKS BARNES
NYT SYNDICATE

ELEVEN years ago, editors at American Association of Retired Person's (AARP) Magazine entered Hollywood's awards fray with the Movies for Grownups Awards. The idea was to give AARP a bigger presence in the movie capital while working to change the image of ageing, one of the association's principal goals. It was tough going, to say the least. As recently as 2007, AARP The Magazine was thrilled to get a dog to walk its red carpet. The collie that starred in a little-known remake of Lassie arrived to accept the prize – a golden lounge chair – for the Best Movie for Grownups Who Refuse to Grow Up. But the AARP didn't give up, coaxing higher-wattage stars to turn up by hectoring their publicists, garnering more media coverage and moving the event to a more central location. On Monday night the gala seemed to have finally, well, grown up – even if some of honorees were dashing for the exits well before the finish. Oscar nominees like Meryl Streep

"We've broken into the circle of awards that the industry cares about. Hollywood is finally getting the message that people over 50 make up a huge audience and we have money to spend and the leisure time to go to theatres."

— NANCY PERRY GRAHAM,
EDITOR OF AARP THE MAGAZINE

(The Iron Lady), Octavia Spencer (The Help), Glenn Close (Albert Nobbs), Martin Scorsese (Hugo) and Alexander Payne (The Descendants) came to the Beverly Wilshire Hotel to collect little lounge chairs. Kenneth Branagh (My Week With Marilyn) was among the presenters; Sharon Stone received a lifetime achievement trophy. "We've broken into the circle of awards that the industry cares about," said Nancy Perry Graham, editor of AARP The Magazine. "Hollywood is finally getting the message that people over 50 make up a huge audience and we have money to spend and the leisure time to go to theatres." Still, some attendees seemed to make it clear how they felt about devoting another evening to another awards dinner, collecting their hardware and making quick getaways. Spencer and her Help colleagues, including Brunson Green, a producer of the film, abandoned their prominent table en masse immediately after their moment on the stage. Payne and Close also made hasty exits, citing other commitments. The months-long lead-up to the Oscars, some participants joke, can start to resemble a death march, although one in which hors d'oeuvres are served along the way. (The AARP had mini lamb chops and crab cakes.) But the AARP, studios say, has become too important to ignore, with millions of baby boomers hitting retirement age every year and young moviegoers – long Hollywood's most reliable audience – becoming more fickle. About 45 million people over 50 went to the movies last year, according to box office analysts, a number that has grown from 27 million in 1995. Sycamore Entertainment Group, a film distribution company, sponsored the awards and made no secret as to why. "It's our goal to capitalise on this under-served market," said Edward Sylvan, Sycamore's chief executive. In terms of the Oscar hunt, the AARP awards falls into the category of leaving no stone unturned. Studios believe the event is heavily attended by voters, in part because so many members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences are over 50 themselves. The event also occurs while Oscar ballots are still out. So there was James Cromwell, accepting the award for best comedy for The Artist, dismissing worries that the mostly silent film is too gimmicky to win big at the Oscars and urging those in the room to give it another look.

Chris Brown & Rihanna to perform at Grammy

CHRIS Brown will perform at this Sunday's Grammy Awards for the first time since beating his then-girlfriend Rihanna in 2009 on the eve of the music industry's biggest night, which threatened to derail his music career. Rihanna also is among the stars performing live at the event, and rumours have flown among fans and celebrity watchers in recent weeks that the pair may be secretly dating again – speculation Brown's representatives have dismissed. Grammy organisers said on Tuesday that Brown, who has three nominations including best R&B singer for his album F.A.M.E., had been added to the line-up for the February 12 awards show in Los Angeles. They said Brown will join Foo Fighters, Lil Wayne, David Guetta and Deadmau 5 for a performance highlighting dance and electronic music for the first time on the Grammy Awards show stage. Organisers said last month that Rihanna, who has four nominations including album of the year for Loud, will sing with Coldplay on the Grammy stage. Brown, 22, has skipped the Grammys since launching a violent attack on Rihanna in 2009, leaving her battered and bruised and Brown in the custody of police. Brown publicly apologised, admitted to criminal assault in court. A judge sentenced him to five years probation, six months' community service and anger management counselling. But his clean-cut image took a major blow. Rihanna's career on the other hand soared, and she scored hits with songs like Man Down and Love the Way You Lie, which dealt with violence against women. The pair appeared to have gone their separate ways but in recent months, speculation buzzed that they had reunited after they were spotted at the same Los Angeles nightclub and put out a series of cryptic messages on Twitter. But Brown's spokesman said in January that Brown and Rihanna were "just friends".

Deepika to star opposite Rajinikanth

DEEPIKA Padukone will now be seen opposite Rajinikanth in Kochadaiyaan, India's first photorealistic film! Soundarya Ashwin, Rajinikanth's daughter and the film's director confirmed this news on the microblogging page saying, "Deepika Padukone confirmed to play appa's pair in Kochadaiyaan, great to have you back!" The big budget film is being made in 3D and Soundarya had earlier announced that they were in talks with Katrina but it wasn't finalised. Although Katrina was pleased with the offer and her role she couldn't accommodate the dates and so the makers had approached Deepika Padukone who has given her nod for the project.

Suriya & Venkat Prabhu's project announced!

ALTHOUGH there was a buzz that Suriya and Venkat Prabhu will be coming together, the duo had remained tight-lipped about it and Venkat only said he had penned a script keeping Suriya in mind. Now, an official announcement has been made by the makers that the duo will be coming together for a bilingual film in Tamil and Telugu. The film will be produced by Studio Green. Rumors are abuzz that the film will be made in 3D. Yuwan Shankar Raja will compose the music for this film and it will start rolling once Suriya finishes work on Maatraan.

Hansika misses out on her dream opportunity

Had Hansika Motwani not been busy with two Tamil films, she would have serenaded a stubble-faced Venkatesh in Shadow

Hansika Motwani

IT was a film Hansika Motwani would never have thought of missing, even in her dreams. But she had to decline the offer when it came knocking at her door, because she has committed herself to two Tamil films. Had she not been busy with these films, she would have serenaded a stubble-faced Venkatesh in Shadow. The film is directed by Meher Ramesh, who, the actress says, is like "my brother". This is the other reason why Hansika Motwani feels sorry to have not been able to work on the film. "I share an excellent rapport with director Meher Ramesh and he's like a brother to me. I wish I were part of the movie Shadow, but I just could not accommodate the dates as I was already committed", After submitting that she will not be able to work on the film, she expresses hope that she will get another chance to work with the director in the near future. Following Hansika's expression of inability to give them the dates, the makers of this action-drama approached Tapsee Pannu.

Priyamani lashes out at media for spreading rumour

TRIBUNE NEWS NETWORK

CCL brand ambassador and Southern actress Priyamani is furious with a section of the Hyderabad media for having created a 'fabricated scandal' between her and Aazaan actor Sachin Joshi. The publication reported that Sachin allegedly teased Priyamani in an inebriated state at a party after the CCL match. The media house reported that he tried to hold her hand and hug Priyamani, rubbing the damsel's ego the wrong way at a CCL after-party. It is said that the report was published despite denial from Sachin's publicist Dale Bhagwagar and Priyamani's mother. This has infuriated the actress, who says, "We (Priyamani and Sachin) were just unwinding after the match. I don't understand why a story like this has been circulated. All it does is harm Sachin and my reputation." Meanwhile, Priyamani will be flying down to Mumbai to hold a joint press conference with Sachin Joshi to clear the air on this.
