Six vaccine workers killed in Afghanistan

At least eight people working for the vaccine campaign against polio have been killed in Afghanistan, according to the Afghan Health Ministry on Thursday.

The health workers were killed in four separate incidents in the northern provinces of Kunduz and Takhar, the health ministry said.

With this understanding, we welcomed the meetings and the resumption of a nationwide vaccination campaign among countries, including Armenia, Chunying said.

"As you know, I already said that we will respond to the same war to positive steps taken by Armenia. This region needs peace, stability and prosperity," she said.

"If this understanding, we welcomed the meetings and the resumption of the nationwide vaccination campaign among countries, including Armenia," Chunying said.

According to estimates, So far, no one has claimed responsibility for the attacks, but local media reported that a West Turkic State terrorist militia has frequently carried out such attacks, in particular in the north-eastern part of the country.

The ruling military Taliban administration has stressed the importance of the nationwide vaccination campaign in November.

Even before the Taliban took control of the country in August, however, authorities repeatedly encountered difficulties in Taliban-controlled areas.

Even before the Taliban took control of the country in August, however, authorities repeatedly encountered difficulties in Taliban-controlled areas.

The Presidentters had previously been killed in Kabul, according to the Afghan Health Ministry.

"We offered our deepest condolences to the families, friends and colleagues of the five vaccine workers on both the UN and the Afghan government," she said.

President Tayyip Erdogan (centre) takes part in a funeral ceremony in Ankara on Wednesday.

China criticises US for Ukraine crisis, while going easy on Russia

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Wang Chuncheng in Beijing on Thursday.

The remarks were made at a daily press briefing in Beijing, according to the Chinese news, noting that the United States has sent at least $5.3 billion dollars’ worth of over 1,000 types of weapons, ammunition to Ukraine.

"At that time, if all the parties had prevented peace talks, reviewed the historical context of the Crimean issue, respected and accommodated each other's concerns and concerns, and resolved in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine, China's concerns would have been met," Wang said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," Wang said.

CHINA has avoided direct criticism of Moscow’s invasion of Ukraine, referring to the conflict as an “act of aggression” and an “invasion” as an “act of aggression.”

"We hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," Wang said.

"We welcome the meeting’s result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," Wang said.

"We welcome the meetings’ result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We welcome the meetings’ result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We welcome the meetings’ result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We welcome the meetings’ result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We welcome the meetings’ result which has been welcomed by all parties and the ongoing talks between Russia and Ukraine," he said.

"We add hope that the pertinent parties will not close the door to peace and instead engage in dialogue and in accordance with the laws and regulations of the conflict between Russia and Ukraine," he said.