Coronavirus survivors share their experience

A Qatari woman, who recovered from the coronavirus (COVID-19) last year, has called on other people to stay in their homes and follow preventive measures after being discharged from the hospital a few days ago, saying that she was among the infected people who returned from London, said some days after returning to Doha she neither became ill nor was taken to the hospital where she tested positive for the virus, less than a week after she arrived with her mother and sister.

On the same day, she said, samples were taken from her family members services provided at the hospital and she was then discharged from the hospital.

In a statement, the MoPH said that anyone who violates this law faces up to three years and a fine up to QR100,000, or one of these two penalties.

Mol urges against public gatherings

The Ministry of the Interior (MoI) has warned against gatherings in public places, especially in parks, squares, restaurants and cafes, and has called on all individuals to follow preventive measures and maintain social distance.

In a news awareness message, the letter said, “Prohibits gatherings on beaches and squares and in front of restaurants and cafes. It also prohibits the holding of congregations in the courtyards of mosques, squares, buildings, or any other square in order to preserve public safety. The ministry warned that anyone who violates this law would face fines up to QR10,000. Those who have recently returned from Qatar to overseas, particularly from the United Kingdom, and some others who have had contact with people infected with the virus, either from family members who live in the same house or from relatives in other homes, have been put into quarantine where they are carrying the necessary medical care, it added.

The MoPH said it is continuing to expand the departments of research and investigation, particularly the necessary examinations for all citizens coming from France, in accordance with all instructions to prevent the infected cases. The ministry called on all members of society to adhere to guidelines on limiting the spread of the virus.
He said, “The decision to transform (HMGH) into a COVID-19 treatment facility is part of the Qatar Authority’s proactive plans to ensure that all measures are in place to control and prevent any potential escalation in the number of patients testing positive for the virus.”

The health ministry’s choice of converting HMGH into a COVID-19 facility because it is located next to a modern hospital environment in which to treat many patients, as well as the many nationalities with COVID-19, is an excellent choice made for the benefit of all concerned. We thank Qatar and its people for their cooperation and understanding at this time,” Dr. Kasbi added.

HMGH’s senior managers and medical staff, including Acting Medical Director for HMGH, Dr. Fahad bin Hamed Bin Ali, and SWEC’s Dr. Ahmad Al Mohamed, Executive Director of Health and Head of Infection Control & Disease Management, Dr. Naseem Anousi, is heading the transition process for the hospital and working in close collaboration with HMC, other hospitals, as well as the Ministry of Public Health.

This aims to ensure that every measure is in place to treat patients with COVID-19, as the whole team has worked closely with HMC to transform HMGH which is the highest standard, with specialisation with our colleagues in Doha,

In light of the opportunity to provide the highest quality of care, particularly to those who are under the care of HMC.

As an emergency service at HMGH have been temporarily suspended until for that reason the hospital’s Emergency Department remains open at all times to treat COVID-19 patients with diabetes;; and whether face masks can protect people against viral respiratory infections. All projects have been funded by QNRF, a member of the Qatar National Research Fund (QNRF), and in coordination with its MC’s facility because

France urges companies to not pay dividends

France stepped up Monday its call for firms using state aid to keep employees on the payroll to continue to pay dividends, a move that would provide financial relief to shareholders but could harm the company's cash flow.

The government said on Monday that firms should not pay dividends and should consider other forms of compensation, such as vouchers or share buybacks, that would not impair the companies' financial health.

“Firms must take all possible measures to contribute to the collective effort to contain the spread of the virus,” Finance Minister Christine Lambrecht said in a statement.

“Such a measure is to be submitted to the board of directors for a decision,” she added.

The government’s move comes as France and other countries have taken steps to stem the spread of the coronavirus, which has brought the global economy to a virtual standstill.

The government has estimated that the French economy could contract by 8 percent in the first half of the year, with the second quarter expected to be even more severe.

The government has also imposed strict lockdown measures to contain the virus, including closure of shops and restaurants, travel restrictions and mandatory mask-wearing in public.

Firms are being asked to contribute to the national effort and to consider the interests of the state, to show their gratitude for the support provided to the economy, Lambrecht said.

“Such a measure is not compatible with support from the state,” she said.

On Tuesday, the state, to show the great commitment of the government and the responsibility of the firms, will set up a website to track the implementation of the measure.

The move comes as the government has asked firms to keep employees on the payroll to avoid job losses and to ensure a rapid recovery once the crisis is over.

The French economy is set to contract by 8 percent this year, and the government has estimated that the unemployment rate could reach 13 percent by the end of the year.

Firms have been asked to keep employees on the payroll until the end of May, and the government has promised to cover part of their wages through a scheme called the “solidarity” program.

S Korea launches voucher scheme to compensate millions of people

South Korea will give gift vouchers to around 45 million households to help alleviate the economic impact of the coronavirus crisis, the government said on Monday.

The measure is part of a broader package of economic stimulus measures announced a day earlier to prop up businesses and encourage consumer spending.

Prime Minister Lee Nak-yon said the government would provide vouchers worth 7.1 trillion won ($6.3 billion) in total, with 5 trillion won ($4.4 billion) going to households and the rest to businesses.

The value of the vouchers can be used to pay for goods and services at a fixed value, which is expected to help boost consumer spending and support the economy.

The government has already asked firms to place 2.2 million workers on furlough, which allows them to continue receiving part of their salaries while the firm is not paying rent and other costs.

Outrage in Germany as Adidas, H&M stop rent payments

German sportswear maker Adidas and clothing giant H&M have put a freeze on rent payments for their stores across Germany, a move that has sparked outrage among small businesses.

Adidas and H&M are among the biggest brands in Europe and have more than 2,000 stores in the country.

The companies said they were doing so due to the economic downturn caused by the coronavirus pandemic, which has hit the retail sector hard.

But Justice Minister Winfried Hermann told the Bild daily, urging retailers to reach out to landlords to negotiate a way forward.

“The time has come that the fundamental interests of society come to the fore,” he said.

The move comes as the government has been under pressure to provide more support for businesses, which have been hit hard by the coronavirus crisis.

In a statement, the government said it would provide a further 60 billion euros ($65 billion) in aid to the sector, bringing the total to 130 billion euros ($141 billion).

But small businesses, which make up around half of the country’s GDP, have said they are being left behind by the measures.

Instacart, Amazon workers plan job actions over safety

Instacart and Amazon workers plan job actions this week, according to a report by The New York Times.

Instacart’s delivery workers are set to begin a work stoppage on Monday to press for safety demands, as a walkout was planned by employees at the online retailer Amazon as well.

The labor action points to growing concerns among workers about food delivery and retail jobs as the pandemic continues to spread, with many people staying at home in the hopes of slowing the virus’s spread.

Instacart, a grocery delivery service owned by Walmart, has faced criticism from workers who say the company has not done enough to protect them from the virus.

The company said it would provide workers with $500 in “sick pay” to help with medical costs and that it would increase pay.

Amazon, which has faced similar criticism, has said it would increase pay and provide additional safety measures.

Oil prices hit 18-year low on shaken demand, stocks rise

Oil prices fell Monday on growing concerns about the impact of the coronavirus on the global economy.

Brent crude ended the session at $21.65 a barrel, while US West Texas Intermediate (WTI) crude closed at $16.87.

Prices have dropped sharply in recent weeks as demand for oil has fallen due to the pandemic.

There are signals that oil prices may continue to fall as storage tanks around the world approach their limits, with Brent crude impacting $23 a barrel.

The global oil market, but the news failed to help WTI-minded Saudi Arabia, meanwhile, it announced that it would remove more exports as 580,000 barrels per day a record in minute 7 million barrels per day in place.

However, US President Donald Trump called him on his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin, who discussed price cuts with the Russia oil producers.

The Tokyo 2020 Olympics will be held from August 24 to September 5, Tokyo 2020 organising committee president, Hidemasa Nakamura, said on Monday, after the coronavirus forced the historic decision to postpone the Games until 2021.

The announcement comes two months after the Games were postponed until next year due to the coronavirus pandemic. The Olympics will be held from July 23 to August 8, 2021, the government of Japan said on Monday it welcomed the new dates for the rescheduled Olympics.

The Tokyo 2020 Olympics were scheduled to begin on July 24 this year and run for 16 days, with the Paralympics to follow on September 2.

The Tokyo Organising Committee of the Olympic and Paralympic Games (Tokyo 2020) has said it welcomed the new dates for the rescheduled Olympics.

The Organisers were forced to delay the Games after the coronavirus pandemic forced the first peacetime postponement of the Games.

The IOC and Japan had worked with more than 1,000 stakeholders to develop the new dates, which were announced on March 24.

The Tokyo 2020 Olympics will now be held from July 23 next year and run for 16 days, with the Paralympics to follow on September 5, Tokyo 2020 president Seiko Hashimoto said on Monday after signing its revised plan.

The new dates were also announced to the International Olympic Committee (IOC) Executive Board in Lausanne.
